

Writing email and letters for the workplace

- TC write a variety of documents not only in TC field but also in workplace i.e. memos, letters and email.
- To communicate with co-workers or audiences, know the essential aspects of workplace writing.
- Co-workers or audiences don't have time, so writing request to motivate readers/audiences to respond to you.

Some Strategies to motivate the readers

1. Know your reader: what are they likely to need or want?
 - The more you know, the better you can write.
 - Demographic characteristics of readers- Age, gender, economic status, ethnicity and class
 - How information moves through an organization-formally, informally
2. What motivates your readers: what are their needs and goals?
 - needs can come from outside (extrinsic) or inside (intrinsic)
 - inside needs are powerful because they last- income, your choice job, regional area, prestige at society, self-interest
 - Outside needs can change, not lasting, less persuasive,
3. Organize and present your ideas to show readers how responding to your request
 - Discuss your points with readers and highlight the points relevant to readers
 - Use headings and focus your main points
 - Anticipate problems or questions and provide solutions or answers.
 - use “you” rather than “I”.

Goals for Workplace communication

- Workplace communication has both primary and secondary goals or purpose of writing

Primary goals

1. Persuading readers to buy a product or service
2. Informing new policy or change in procedure

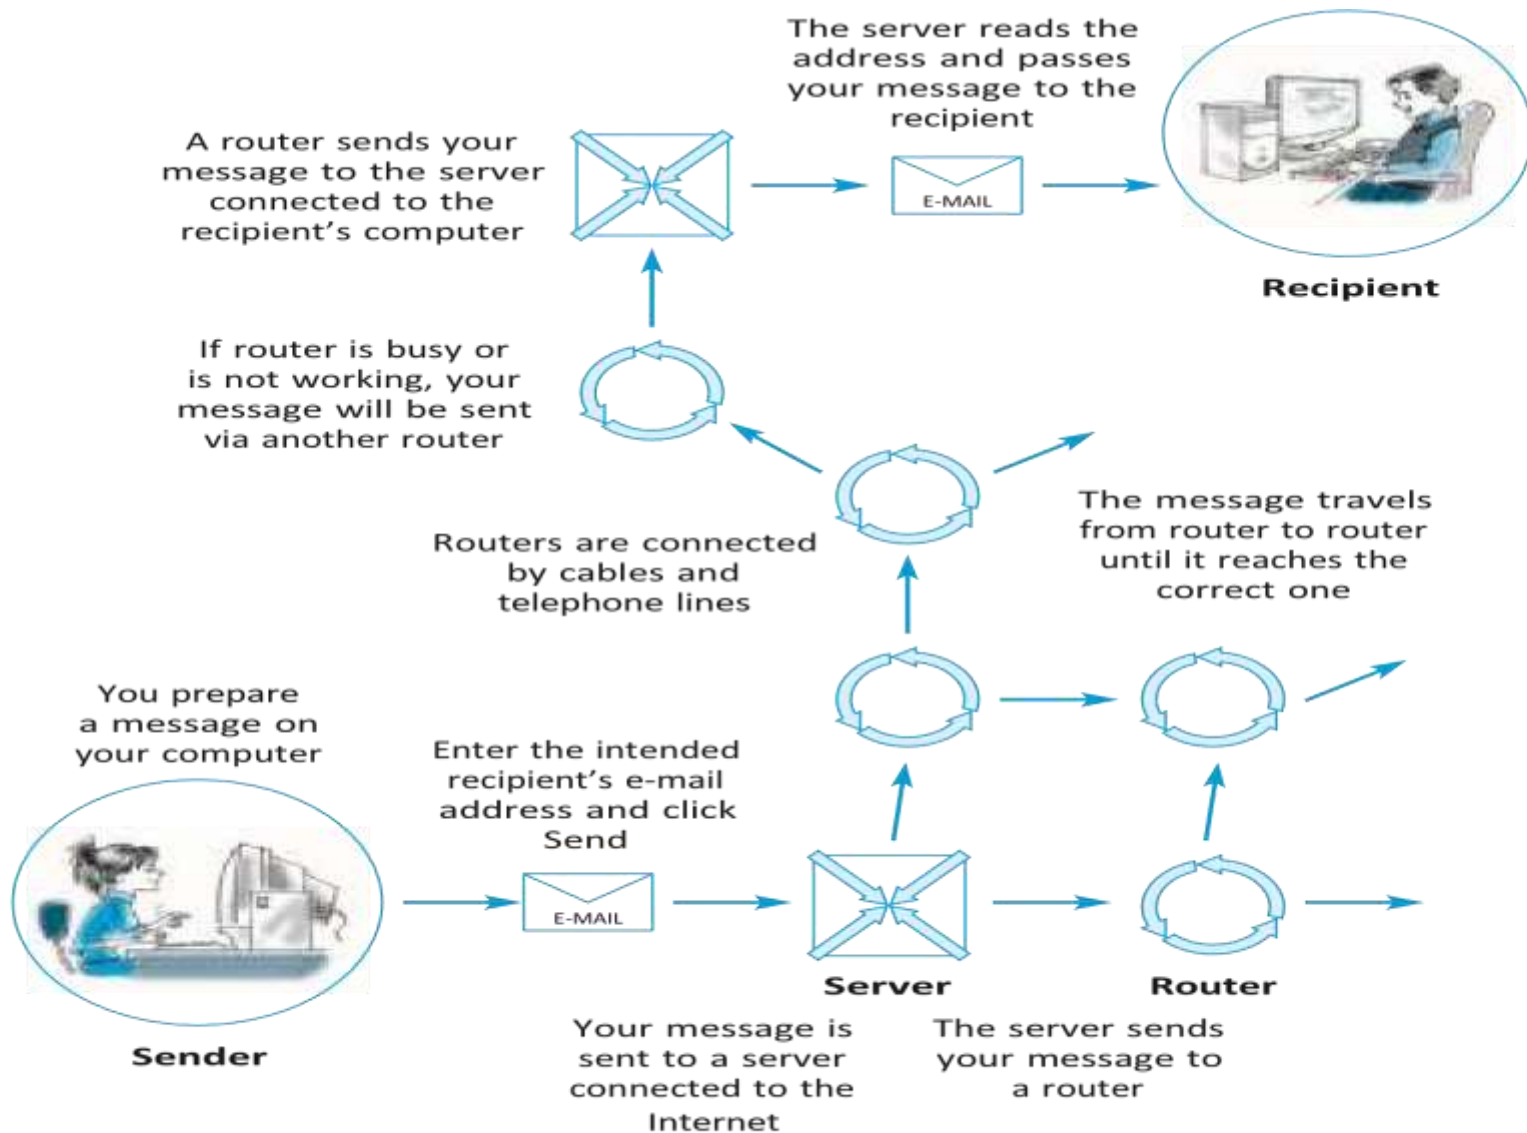

Secondary goals

1. Build (Create) goodwill (positive impression) for writer and organization.
2. Provide all required information to readers and readers need for further communication

Using Email

- Email or electronic mail is one of the most widely used features of the internet, along with web. It allows you to send and receive message to and from anyone with an email address, anywhere in the world. It is free or cheap to send an email anywhere in the world. So, it is the another form of business communication medium.
- The popular forms of free email applications are Gmail, Yahooemail and Hotmail. Many companies have their own internal email applications.
- In businesses at present high-speed communication and information transfer is essential. Most of the activities in today's offices are electronic, using computer-based technology.
- Electronic mail/ e-mail has changed as an effective, low-cost and instant method of communication with friends and colleagues all over the world.
- With e-mail, messages are keyed into a computer workstation and then transmitted to the recipient. A single message may be sent simultaneously to many recipients.

Assignment

- Writing a Solution-Finding Email to Your Instructor
- Let's say you've just discovered that you will have to miss your next technical communication class because you have to attend the funeral of an extended family member, but you have an assignment due at the beginning of that class. Write an email message to your instructor using the information.
- Remember, you need to both identify and solve the problem that your upcoming absence will create.
- Writing a Direct Request Message
- Assume you are an intern at a software engineering firm and you have just received an email about a software engineering conference that you would like to attend. Using the basic organizational structure outlined for a direct request message draft an email to your supervisor inquiring about the possibility of attending this conference as part of your work experience. Make sure to explain why this experience will benefit him or her as well as you.
